For Immediate Release

Lancaster, Pa. - Barley Snyder is proud to announce it has hired Amanda Jabour Kowalski as the firm's 81st attorney and its sixth attorney hired in 2017.

Kowalski, a Lancaster County native, has practiced in Washington, D.C., since she graduated from George Washington University Law School in 2010. Now she returns home to work as an associate in Barley Snyder's Lancaster office as part of its Business Practice Group.

In our nation's capital, she had been an associate with a leading global law firm, as well as an in-house counsel with E*Trade Bank. She earned her undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Barley Snyder's growth has led to the firm expanding its practice areas in spaces such as business, real estate, employment, health law and litigation. The firm already has plans to hire another attorney in early 2018, and more throughout next year.

"While significant growth like what we've been experiencing is always welcomed, it creates the challenge of recruiting top talent to continue our trajectory," Barley Snyder managing partner Jeff Lobach said. "Amanda is a shining example of the firm's ability to bring the best attorneys to our region."
