Lancaster, Pa. - Barley Snyder partner Maria Di Stravolo Elliott has been named to the Fulton Theatre Board of Trustees.

The performing arts venue based in downtown Lancaster, Pa. brings in national touring productions and fosters community engagement through its numerous theater training programs.

"The Fulton Theatre is such an important part of central Pennsylvania, providing access to live theatre, bringing people together and encouraging creativity," said Elliott. "I've always been a fan of Fulton Theatre ever since I was in college and now I'm proud to be a part of an organization that continues to grow and give back to our community."

Elliott is a partner in Barley Snyder's Real Estate Practice Group, Construction Industry Group and other firm groups. She has a passion for the performing arts, singing as a cantor at St. James Catholic Church in Lititz and performing in various musicals and comedies during her younger years.

"Barley Snyder has been a long-time supporter of the Fulton Theatre and understands the importance of maintaining that support for the enrichment of our community," said Barley Snyder Partner Joshua Schwartz who previously served on Fulton Theatre's board since 2016.

Elliott has three children, lives in Lititz and is an avid pickle ball player. In addition to her board service with Fulton Theatre, she is the president of Venture Lititz and a member of the Lititz Rec Center Development Committee. She previously served on the board of directors for the Lititz Regional Community Development Corporation and the Lancaster Symphony Orchestra along with many other local organizations.
