York, Pa. - Barley Snyder is pleased to announce that Partner Justin Tomevi has been admitted to practice in the District of Columbia. Tomevi is one of several attorneys at Barley Snyder who are admitted to practice in the District of Columbia as well as other states outside of the Commonwealth.

Tomevi is a partner in the firm's Litigation Practice Group, assisting businesses, institutions and individuals in identifying and managing litigation risk, resolving disputes and achieving their objectives. He concentrates his practice on commercial, real estate, fiduciary and banking litigation. In addition to D.C. and Pennsylvania, Tomevi is admitted to practice in Maryland. He has been recognized by the Million and Multi-Million Dollar Advocates Forums, and as a Rising Star in Pennsylvania by Super Lawyers each year since 2016.

"I look forward to further leveraging my practice to assist clients who are expanding operations beyond Pennsylvania," said Tomevi. "I would like to give credit to our firm for continually evolving and expanding our services to meet the needs of our growing clientele."

Along with Tomevi, attorneys Amanda Kowalski, Emily Marzock, and Joshua Schwartz are admitted to practice law in D.C. Barley Snyder has an office located in Columbia, Md. which the firm utilizes to serve clients located in the D.C metro area.

In addition to D.C., Barley Snyder has numerous attorneys admitted to practice in other states including Connecticut, Florida, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Virginia.

"Barley Snyder has the breadth and manpower to serve clients, not only throughout Pennsylvania, but well beyond our footprint," Tomevi added.
