OVERVIEW:

John is a member of the firm's Real Estate and Business practice groups with more than twenty years of experience. On the real estate side, he represents developers, business owners, landlords, lenders, property managers, and foundations in both commercial and residential matters. He has extensive experience negotiating and drafting leases, handling commercial and residential leasing transactions, and advising on the acquisition, disposition, and financing of real estate projects. His work also includes advising on the creation and governance of planned communities and condominiums.

John's experience spans large-scale commercial transactions as well as transactions for closely held businesses and individual investors. He frequently helps clients structure and close deals efficiently, balancing risk management with practical business goals. He has also represented clients in real estate tax assessment appeals across eastern Pennsylvania and regularly counsels landlords in bankruptcy and workout situations involving commercial tenants.

In addition to his real estate practice, John counsels business clients on a wide range of corporate matters, including entity formation, governance issues, purchase and sale agreements, broker agreements, mergers, and stock or asset acquisitions. He also serves as outside counsel to businesses, foundations and other organizations, providing ongoing guidance on contracts, leases and day-to-day operational needs.
